BY VINCENT THOMAS
 Assemblyman, 68th District
 Legislative compromises are sometimes hard to come by. The hard truth of this is being only too well demonstrated at our current special session. As of this minute, the Senate is deadlocked over budget increases, and both houses are practically marking time.
 As predicted, the tax program bills have created all the difficulty. The withholding measure for the personal income tax, as anticipated when the Senate held its unusual closed session during our first weeks, died in committee. Other parts of the program, however, moved swiftly out of the Senate. Bills to end installment payment of the income tax, and to reorganize payment of the insurance tax were passed without controversy.

THE SITUATION proved quite a bit different when it came to the bill to speed up payment of the bank and corporation tax. This is the measure, it will be recalled, that came a cropper over the two-thirds vote rule in the last hours of the regular session, and brought all the other tax bills tumbling down with it.
 This time the language has been changed considerably, though not the over-all purpose of the bill, and administration leaders were armed with opinions both from the attorney-general and the legislative council to the effect that with the changed wording, it could be passed with only a simple majority vote.
 When the echoes of oratory died away, the bill passed the Senate by the tight vote of 22-14. Once again, the possibility was raised of court action if the bill is finally passed with only this vote to its credit in the Senate.

 IN THE meantime, the bill to add some $114 million to the $3.14 billion budget act already signed by the governor had been heard by the Senate Finance Committee. The committee cut some $32 million from the total, mostly from proposed pay increases for state workers and from appropriations for new state functions. About $2 million was added to other items, including money for the governor's mansion, thus making the net reduction some $30 million.
 When the bill, carrying this lower total of $84 million, came up for action on the Senate floor the opposition to the bank and corporation tax measure seized their opportunity. The budget bill must get a two-thirds vote. The administration needed 27 votes to meet this requirement, but the most which could be mustered was 24. The opposition stood firm during a 12-hour attempt to change things, then the Senate recessed until the next morning. The opposition were determined that the objectionable speed-up features of the tax bill must be removed before the budget bill would be given the required votes.
DURING this time, the fortunes of the various bills to grant state funds to public schools shifted with bewildering rapidity. The principal Assembly measure, which would provide an additional $40 million for this year, and $60 million for the next, and which also provided for a countywide property tax to raise $27.5 million more, was amended in committee to remove this latter tax completely. The bill author said that if it were left that way, he would attempt to cut out the extra $20 million for the second year. In the Senate, a bill for the same purpose which proposed to distribute funds on a formula of classroom size and teacher salaries lost this feature as well as the countywide tax provision.
 Oh, yes, a bill to appropriate money for two more weeks of the special session has just been introduced. We all hope it's not needed.

Dog Training Classes Set At City Park

Dog obedience classes, open to youthful trainers of 10 to 14 years and dogs of six months and older, will be sponsored by the Torrance Recreation Department beginning Saturday and running until Sept. 7 at Walteria Park.
 Roy Smith, trainer for the Dog Obedience Club of Torrance, has volunteered to teach the class. Meetings will be held on Saturday mornings at 10 a.m. Training equipment needed will consist of a 6-foot leather leash and slip chain collar, both of which may be purchased at the first meeting.
 A second requirement for participation will be that a senior member of the child's immediate family accompany the youthful trainer and dog to each class meeting.
 Application blanks are available at the Torrance Recreation Department office, where registration may be completed. Fee for the class will be 50 cents, which will be used to purchase trophies for winners at the class graduation.
